The History of the Hudson's Maurice

A Maurice Salad is a version of a chef's salad that was popularized in the restaurants at J.L.

Hudson's, the famous Detroit department store. The store (later known as Dayton-Hudson's and then Marshall Field's) closed its downtown Detroit location in 1983. The other stores have since converted to Macy's, and in the Detroit area, the stores still serve the Maurice Salad in their restaurants.

Legend has it that the salad was named for a chef at Hudson's restaurant. The dressing was its secret, and Hudson's finally gave in to customer requests and made the recipe public.
